GI]BBON has the pleasure of announcing that [he has] returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his old office, 623 Kearney street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those [requiring] his services may find him. [The Doc]tor has spared neither time nor money in [seeking] out new remedies, and has returned with [increased] facilities for the alleviation of human [suffering].

Horrible Diseases.

Many thousands of persons, both male and female, there who are suffering out a miserable life from the effects of secret indulgence or [diseases] absorbed into the system. Look at [the] emaciated and disfigured faces and [ruined] constitutions, disqualifying them [for the du]ties of marriage or the enjoyment of [life]. Amid situation thousands suffer until death [closes the] scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, all those who are suffering with any of these [fearful] maladies—see that they are [treated] and cured before it be too late. Send them [immediate]ly to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made these diseases his especial study for years, and is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important that those who are afflicted, or to those interested in the welfare of their friends, to know that the many pretended doctors who are publishing their skill in curing all diseases, are imposing upon the public [illegible] of eminent physicians from Europe [illegible]. Be therefore careful and [illegible] you may fall into the hands of [illegible].

Seminal Weakness.

Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse, vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is by the youth of both sexes to an almost [incredible] extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combated by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fœtid breath, [con]sumption, night sweats, monomania and [i]nsanity. If relief be not obtained, should [apply] immediately, either in person or by letter, and be restored by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a speedy and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Thousand Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

Married Men,

Who contemplate marriage, who are suffering from any of these fearful maladies, should not neglect the sacred responsibility resting upon them, but apply to obtain immediate relief.

DR. GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders, who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self-styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly papers of San Francisco and other places, are men who were and became too lazy to work at their trade; some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper [venders], intelligence office keepers, etc. The [wise will] avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost nothing, and may save you many regrets. Advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten, there is no safety in trusting any of them, unless you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. [He] will satisfy persons who may call at his office of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes.

Cured at Home.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, name, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. The French Army—No Uneasiness in Germany.

Paris, June 1.—The Official Gazette, commenting on Lord Derby's statement in the British House of Lords, admits that the increase of the French army caused a certain amount of uneasiness, which was not attended, however, with warlike resolves or designs in Germany. The idea of requesting France to reduce her forces or discontinue her military organization, was never entertained or conceived.

England Urged to Interfere in Cuban Affairs.

London, June 1.—The anti-slavery society deputation, comprising half a dozen members of parliament, yesterday evening presented a memorial to Lord Derby urging on the government of Great Britain the duty of taking decisive steps by way of friendly mediation to bring about an equitable termination of war in Cuba and abolition of the slave trade. Mr. Ashley said as the United States had relinquished the idea of annexing Cuba, the good offices might be relied on to support this movement. Others called attention to the atrocities in the Coolie traffic. Lord Derby said the government had no right to interfere in the Coolie question. An assertion made by memorialists that the Cuban war was fast culminating in favor of the insurgents was premature. He did not think Spain would view any proposal of mediation favorably. Lord Derby said the British government would be glad to avail itself of any prospect offered for putting an end to existing state of things in Cuba. Emancipation of the slaves would no doubt sooner or later be accomplished. Slave-owners are aware of this, and are only fighting for the continuance of the present system. He believed emancipation would not be accomplished by itself, but must form a part of a scheme for the pacification of the island. The present time was not favorable for English interference. He believed the United States had no desire to annex Cuba, but at the same time the American government would receive any attempt of England to interfere between Spain and Cuba with suspicion, and be apt to put a wrong construction upon it.

Sympathy for the Imprisoned Cabinet-Makers.

London, June 2.—A mass-meeting was held in Hyde Park to-day, to express sympathy for the cabinet-makers who have just been released from imprisonment, to which they were sentenced for accosting workmen on their way to work, and endeavoring to induce them to join in the strike. It is estimated that 10,000 people took part in the demonstration. Resolutions were adopted declaring the sentence a gross violation of personal rights. The speakers denounced the laws as being in the interest of the privileged class.

MEXICO.

Railroads and other Matters.

Cincinnati, June 2.—The Gazette's New Orleans special says advices from the Mexican capital to the 26th ult. received states that the Mexican congress approved of the contract, by the government, with Daniel Beeryl Blair for the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Guaymas to the frontier between the State of Sonora and the American Territory of Arizona, with branches from Guaymas to Ures and Alamoza. The obligations require the main line to be constructed in five years. The government grants to the company 20,000 acres of land for every mile of road built, and agrees to pay $9,000 each year for five years.

On the 24 ult. the committee of Indian presented to the Mexican congress a report recommending the approval of the contract between the executive and E. L. Plumb for the construction of the railroad from the city of Leon to a point on the north frontier on Rio Bravo. The Mexican congress resolved itself into a grand jury on the same day to consider the impeachment on charges made against Viacente Riva Palaco, which discussion resulted in acquittal by a vote of 118 to 10. No effort made by Mexico to stop depredations on the frontier.

THE TILTON-BEECHER CASE.

Evarts Still Speaking.

New York, June 2.—The attraction of the Masonic procession materially reduced the attendance at the Beecher trial. Evarts continued his address by saying he would reconsider the probable attitude, tone and reception of the accusation which would mark the first interview between an accusing husband and the adulterer. Was adultery to be treated like a cut finger or a bruised brow, when the injured husband met the defiler of his marriage bed and the shame of his children and children's children? The jury might imagine: If there had been at the bottom an opinion on the part of the accuser and conscientiousness on the part of the accused, they would have had an interview for which no previous knowledge could have prepared them. Counsel would show that plaintiff's story of an interview was a self-exposed invention. Plaintiff understood his wife's confession couldn't be made the subject of a case against Beecher. Plaintiff had covered the story with such inconsistencies as made it appear incredible. He knew the law would not permit a statement of what occurred between himself and wife, and he wove it into a narrative which he could tell the jury he had related to Beecher; said he would gild the story so it would be believed, and he was, as has been shown, a victim of his own shadow.

Evarts quoted from the testimony of Moulton as to his calling him in and telling him Tilton wished to see him. This friend as he is called, wanted to propitiate the mind of Beecher toward Tilton and gloss over the stories told Beecher by Bowen. Moulton weighed his words and chose his topics for an object. Beecher said when Bowen brought the letter to him, he pledged his friendship to him. Beecher. Tilton finds Bowen has been using that interview with Beecher for his own purposes, and Beecher found that Bowen's stories had acted on Tilton's mind and driven his mind astray. Moulton had told Beecher he wanted to show him how a heathen would act in such a case, and proffered a heathen's friendship. Then came the interview between the husband and the alleged paramour. How would all the passion, rage and grief of the injured pour forth in a flood at such an interview. The narrative of this meeting was entirely inconsistent with such situation. He began telling Beecher he wished him to blot out of memory the letter he had written him, and wished to ascertain how Beecher felt toward him. He knew Beecher loved his wife, but wished to find out how he regarded him. Evarts considered the testimony of Tilton in regard to this interview in detail, arguing that the whole conversation was absurdly inconsistent with the charge of adultery under such circumstances.

Bowen said he had forgiven Beecher his crimes. These crimes, according to Bowen, had been going on twenty-five years. Where did Bowen get the power to forgive them? After all this talk about the letter and about Bowen, Tilton came to his accusations against Beecher, and spoke about Elizabeth and her shame. This aroused Beecher's interest, and he asked Tilton what he meant by it. Tilton declared his wife made a charge against Beecher in the previous July, and she made it under a pledge he would not use it to Beecher's injury. If he had made such pledge he had broken it. According to his own statement he had written a letter with which he intended to strike Beecher to the heart and drive him out of Brooklyn in twelve hours. Every step these people took they were obliged to acknowledge the same action, infamous and in violation of their pledge.

Evarts discussed the alleged written confession of Mrs. Tilton, the original of which was destroyed by Moulton after the tripartite agreement, while the copy used by Tilton, December 30th, was destroyed in the same interview. He called attention to the fact in argument on the question that now it was maintained by plaintiff's counsel, Beach and Fullerton, that this copy was purposely destroyed by Tilton with Beecher's consent, yet the next time plaintiff went upon the stand he threw his counsel overboard, and said the paper was accidentally destroyed by his twisting it in his fingers during the heat of conversation. Counsel urged the jury to remember the fact that Tilton told Beecher his wife said certain things was not so, that she did not say them. The evidence of what she did say could be introduced in any other way, and why Tilton could be cross-examined as to whether he told Beecher all this rigmarole, and could not be as to his conversation with his wife, he did not understand. Evarts spoke of testimony of Tilton as to his wife's statement to him in July, 1870, and commented on the alleged confession as contrary to all nature and probability. Tilton could invent speeches for Tilton, but could not invent them for this woman. The alleged confession betrayed no conscientiousness of the sinner's guilt on the part of the woman whose eyes flashed fire when they looked upon Victoria Woodhull. It was improbable, all this alleged conversation. He said it was not to be charged for a moment when a witness like Beecher declared nothing of the kind was ever brought to his ears. After the deliberate introduction, according to Tilton, his wife told him the secret she had referred to was one between her and Beecher, her pastor. She was careful there should be no mistake about the person; she gave him the full name, title and office. She didn't want her husband to infer she had committed adultery with the man in the moon. She gave a special and deliberate account of her relations with Beecher from the beginning. Was this the way an accused wife would confess guilt to her husband? Wouldn't she have done so in sobs and tears? Mrs. Tilton explained that the first act of adultery was the result of grief for the death of Paul, who, she was particular to say, was her son, such act being the natural consequence of the state of the mother's mind after her child's death. There was no need to argue about this. [Laughter.] Mrs. Tilton said the act was repeated at her house, and as most people were liable to move, she specified her house was No 174 Livingstone street. She also said the act was committed at other places, but strange to say those other places didn't appear to have been found out by others. Evarts spoke of the uncertainty expressed by Mrs. Tilton as to the criminality of committing adultery with Beecher, and said if such was the state of the mind of the woman, confessed by her husband to be a pure-minded woman 35 years of age and mother of six children, we must ask maidens at the altar their opinion on the propriety of such acts, in order to avoid difference of opinion between them and husbands. [Laughter.] Evarts referred to Mrs. Tilton's explanation of the way her scruples were overcome since Tilton was informed that the crime had been committed. It must have been pleasant for him to have the manner of it thus carefully explained the alleged confession of Mrs. Tilton as repeated by her husband to Beecher. She said Beecher said he wished to find in her that solace of life and help to his mind which an unhappy marriage had denied him at home. What become then of 25 years' adulteries from Indianapolis down. It was rather late in life for him to fall in love and seek alleviation for his domestic misery for the first time when he reached the age of 66, had been the father of nine children, was a grandfather, and been faithful to his wife since both 15 years! The representations of Beecher that adultery with him would not be sinful were not at first believed and yielded to by Mrs. Tilton. She said for years she steadfastly refused his solicitations, and sometimes was forced to resort even to bodily resistance. What is to be thought of the chastity of a woman who calmly confessed to such a course of conduct during a series of years? Yet Tilton thought he had cast the white robe of chastity over his wife when he put such language in her mouth. Why or how Mrs. Tilton got from No. 174 Livingstone street to the house of her tempter on the 10th of October, 1868, was not yet explained. Was she carried there, in her sleep? Another part of Mr. Tilton's confession presented the anomaly of a woman wholly pure in mind, free from all low and degraded instincts, and who deliberately yielded herself to the profligacy of a hypocritical religious teacher. This was the way Tilton made adultery easy and pure. This was the verbal protection he gave to acts which strike the very heart of female character. Evarts proceeded to describe what Tilton calls the wife awakening to the sin of adultery. For a year it never occurred there was anything wrong about it, but all at once the thought burst upon her that after all the keeping of two bed-fellows might not be right. It wasn't so much adultery that troubled her as the thought that Theodore didn't know about it. She told him in order to relieve her mind. This is Theodore's version. Can any intelligent person believe that a woman active in Christian work, brought up under Christian influence, familiar with the commandments, could commit adultery with her pastor quite unconscious that she was sinning? Tilton wrote her a letter, saying if she ever lied to him as she had in a few minor matters, he would never hold her in respect. This was Tilton's conception of the ideal happy home. But for that letter the woman never would have awakened to her committing the offense of adultery until the Judgment day. That letter led her to come from the country and make her confession. At this time occurred the interview between Bowen and Tilton, which had the result of bringing about this charge. Mrs. Tilton had an interview with Beecher, but never informed him of having told her husband this story. The plaintiff says his wife told him to go to Beecher and inform him he need not be worried about her letter, and told him to do it quick, and that his wife asked him to give her a pledge that he would not demand Beecher's resignation from the pulpit and his leaving Brooklyn. This the jury were soberly asked to believe of a communication between husband and wife, and the husband and paramour. Tilton thought she had committed the offense while in a trance; that was the excuse for his wife's adultery. He also testified that Elizabeth said she was not to be judged by her mother or her husband, but only by God, and that if her offenses were sinful God would not have allowed them to be committed.

Court adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Washington, June 2.—The President had a council with the Indians at the interior department to-day. The press and all outsiders were excluded. The commissioner gives the following synopsis of the interview: The president explained the agreement that had been drawn relinquishing the right to hunt in Nebraska, and reserving to them the country north of Nebraska river, outside their reservation. All the country north of North Platte is considered as unceded territory. By this they give up a portion of this country, and reserve the part where Red Cloud and Spotted Tail Agencies are located. He said the $20,000 were for presents and to be given in money. He offered to allow them to name a person to receive the money and buy such things as they wanted. He expressed a desire to see them well provided for during his term of office, and asked them to consider the question of removing to Indian Territory.

Spotted Tail said government was making too much; that a certain portion of their country had never been ceded, and he wanted to know when they were to be paid for that. He alluded to the section which they still intended to retain. He declined to sign the agreement. He said he would go home to his people and send word back what he would do. He was told the money would lapse into the treasury June 30th, and he asked if some one here could not hold it until they could return to their country and send word back what the people would do.

The President finally was compelled to leave, the Indians having declined to sign the agreement.

The Unanima, 750 tons register, Longfellow, 800 tons, Beulah, 750 tons, have been chartered, and the two first named will sail from England soon to convey part of the 5,000 tons of rails to Vancouver Island, to be used in the construction of the Canadian overland railway. The Beulah has already sailed. The rails are being manufactured at the rate of 400 to 500 tons a week.

Father Darieu has been staying at Chilliwhack for the last two weeks, engaged in Indian missionary labor. He has about 30 natives working on a new church for Co-co-pet and Sy-all-ub. The building is 40x20 feet. The Indians are rather dissatisfied about their land, so much so that they would not attend the celebration at Victoria. They say business before pleasure.

Some new diggings have been found at Cariboo. The most experienced and reliable miners are of opinion that the diggings will prove to be rich. Up to Wednesday, of last week, 3,400 feet of new ground had been staked off and recorded, and about two miles of the creek is now held by four companies. Interests in the Peters Creek Company are held at high figures, and several interests in the Barkerville Company, adjoining their lower lines, and in which a pick has never been struck, have changed hands at good prices. This "strike" is the most important that has taken place in Cariboo for a long time, as it will draw the attention of miners to a rich but neglected section of country.

Mr. Waters who arrived at Victoria in the steamer Isabel from Wrangel, states that the Cassiar diggings are nearly all still closed with the frost. Portions of Dease creek are open; two companies were at work, doing little however. Business of all kinds was dull at Wrangel and in the mines. In the principal saloons—Messrs. Murphy's, Brown's and Blum's—the lights were out at 10 o'clock, business was so slack. The men who are at the Deloire sick with the scurvy, and before reported, are still down, and some of them, it is feared will not recover. The funeral of poor Wadleigh, who cut himself with an ax, took place at Wrangel on Saturday week last. The Hope arrived at Wrangel from the Stikine the day before the Isabel left. She was inspected by Capt. Cooper before leaving. Johnston, the mail contractor, had not returned from the mines before the sailing of the Isabel. Miss Louise Irving returned from Wrangel in the Isabel.

Whittier on Barbara Freitchie.—Mr. Whittier says all the recent attempts made to invalidate the story of Barbara Freitchie as related in his poem come from dissatisfied persons to whom a remembrance of the occurrence is distasteful. He declares his belief in the verity of the act to be as perfect and unshaken as on the day in which he first formed it. His faith is founded not only on the testimony of friends who learned the disputed facts in the city of Frederick, but by confirmatory and unsolicited evidence from numerous persons in the South. He first heard the story from a lady of Virginia birth, now living in the District of Columbia, whose veracity is unquestioned. Other authorities were Miss Dorothea Dix, Judge John C. Underwood, late of the United States District Court of Virginia, and a daughter of Stonewall Jackson, who wrote to the poet thanking him for his tender mention of her father. Mr. Whittier gave these facts to a reporter of the Boston Advertiser, with extracts from the letters alluded to, and in closing the conversation added: "I am a little afraid the incident will stick to the old lady for some time yet."

THE TERRITORIES.

Bismarck has recently been made a money-order postoffice.

The Indians about Port Gamble are making great preparations for a grand potlach, to come off in that vicinity in a few weeks.

The vegetables about Boise City were all up and looking nicely, but on Wednesday night of last week there came a killing frost and nipped them all."

A coal barge belonging to the Renton Coal Company, on Monday last, while coming down Black river, filled with water and sunk. She will soon be raised.

The Talbot coal company lost some 75 tons of coal, early last week, by the snagging and partial up-setting of one of their coal barges, on the Duwamish river.

The Alaska which is awaiting her turn at Seattle to load with coal at the Seattle Co.'s wharf, is about the largest vessel which has yet visited that port, and will take down a cargo of 2,100 tons of coal.

The total population of Skamania county, W. T., according to recent census returns, is 166, of which number 93 are white males, 37 white females, 17 colored males and 20 colored females. The total value of assessable property in the county foots up to $129,911.

An effort is now in process of being made for an extension of the daily mail from Tacoma to Seattle. It has been fostered into activity through the suggestion of A. J. Wickizer, of Salt Lake, a special postal agent, who has been detailed by the postoffice department to inspect postal matters on this northern coast.

The "Heathen Chinee" is scattered all along the road between Silver City and Trout creek, in Idaho. If there is a mud cabin to be seen, his unprepossessing snoot comes to the front, and where new diggings have recently been discovered, John is around with his pan and takes a hand in picking up the dust.

On Saturday night last the law office of the Hon. J. F. McGilvra, at Seattle, was broken into by burglars, who carried away with them a shotgun, a pistol, a lot of cartridges, and some thirty odd dollars which they abstracted from the safe, they having found a duplicate key to the same in a trunk which they had broken open.

Last week there was at Utsalady a meeting of arbitrators to settle all matters between the heirs of Mr. Grennan, deceased, and the Utsalady Mill Co. They adjourned, to conclude their labors at Seattle, till the 19th of June. Messrs. John Collins, G. W. Bullene, of Seattle, and Robert Hill, of Island county, are the arbitrators in this important case, and James McNaught, Esq., represents the heirs.

The Intelligencer says: The Seattle coal company have one of their new barges for Lake Washington about completed, and it will be launched next Saturday. It is 140 feet in length, with a breadth of beam of 30 feet. Three more of the same size are to be built at once, and as soon as the machinery arrives, which is now on the way, the steamer intended for towing them will be placed upon the ways.

A person writing from Idaho City in search of employment, tells what he can do. Among other things, he says: "I can work in the mines or in a tin shop; scribble a little for a newspaper, collect bills, drive stage, cook a square meal (bachelor style), play the gentleman of leisure and lie like a lawyer." Probably he is "Jack of all trades, and master of none," and that may have something to do with his present impecunious condition. He ought to be able to make a living somewhere.

The Boise Statesman of 29th ult. says: "Henry Stark was in town on Thursday, and had about a half a yeast power can of gold dust in his hand on his way to the assay office. He has been using the water of Stewart and Crane's gulch, but in the course of two weeks will have a two-mile ditch completed which taps Dry creek, affording a much larger supply of water. He says he has not got into the best paying ground yet. He is very sanguine that he has a good thing, and we guess he has, and don't begrudge it to him either, for he has hunted the hills over around town as thoroughly as any miner in this part of the country."

OREGON.

The work of transforming Marion Square at Salem from a cow corral into a beautiful park has at last commenced.

Rev. J. Bowersox, who has been a resident of Salem the past 5 years as pastor of the Evangelical Church, has been transferred by the board of missions from that place to Albany. Mr. Bowersox leaves for the future scene of his labors in about two weeks.

Professor L. L. Rowland, the State superintendent of public instruction, has recently returned from a long official tour through Eastern Oregon. Mr. R. has been absent about six weeks, and during that time has visited nearly every school east of the Cascades.

At the last meeting of the common council of Salem the committee on accounts and current expenses reported that their estimates for current expenses during the next fiscal year amounted to $11,286. Among the principal items were: For police, $1,200; fire department, $1,100; water, $1,320; gas, $892; streets, $900; fees and salary of marshal, $1,100; street grade, $500; incidental, $550.

The Statesman says: "The Sisters' school, located at St. Paul, 18 miles below Salem, is being rebuilt and improved. Several thousand brick are needed for that purpose, and the public-spirited farmers of that locality are hauling them there free of charge. Last Monday 19 of the farmers brought up their wagons, loaded them with brick at the penitentiary, started back to St. Paul, and yesterday two more loads went down. This is the kind of public-spirited enterprise which will build up any locality."

A PERILOUS BALLOON VOYAGE.

The Pall Mall Gazette of May 5 says: "An aeronaut named Youens had a perilous balloon journey last night. He had been engaged by the Messrs. Sanger to ascend from Nunhead Grounds, Peckham, and commenced inflating the balloon at 8 o'clock in the morning, but in consequence of a scarcity of gas the balloon was only three parts filled when the time to ascend came. Several gentlemen wished to accompany Mr. Youens, but he declined to take any one with him. The ascent was rapid until he got into a south south-east current, which carried him back to the place from which he started. A slight breeze sprung up again from the southward, and ultimately Mr. Youens found himself over the river Thames. When between London Bridge and Southwark Bridge the balloon appeared stationary. At 7:45 it was carried by a south current toward St. Paul's Cathedral, and Mr. Youens states that he was driven back toward the Thames no fewer than six times. By throwing out some ballast he got into a south south-west current, which carried him over the railway bridge at Ludgate Hill, and shortly after 8 o'clock the balloon fell with great velocity into Farringdon Market. Mr. Youens was unhurt, but a thief, taking advantage of the confusion caused by the crowd which gathered around the place where the balloon fell, stole the aeronaut's watch. The neighborhood of the market is said to have been impassable, owing to the crowd, and upward of 12,000 persons got over the iron railing surrounding the market."

Theft and Recovery of Ristori's Jewels.—Omaha, May 28.—Madame Ristori, the celebrated actress, who is on her way to California, arrived in this city last evening. Upon her arrival she received a telegram from the chief of police at St. Louis, stating that a number of diamonds belonging to her had been recovered. This telegram was the first intimation Ristori had of her loss, and found, upon examining her trunks, that she had been robbed. It is supposed they were abstracted from her trunks after they left the hotel at St. Louis, and were offered for sale by suspicious characters and recognized as the property of Ristori.

SOME THINGS THAT NEED EXPLANATION.

Yoncalla, June 1, 1875.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In your editorial in the Weekly Oregonian of March 6th, I find, "those who continue, with fairness and moderation, to expose the shortcomings of the party leaders, and that promptly and without waiting for a 'proper time,' will prove its truest supporters. When the time comes, if the time shall ever come, when political rascality will in all cases be followed by quick and thorough exposure, and its perpetrators be at once held up to public scorn by a free and vigilant press, the political atmosphere will be healthier [illegible] and the proper time for that is now, to-day,—all the time."

This editorial will undoubtedly meet with the hearty approbation of all the readers of the Oregonian. Ever since 1870, the owners of Reed's opera house, at Salem, have offered to rent it to the State for $1,500 a year,—$3,000 for two years. The committee on retrenchment and reform in 1874, reported that Secretary Chadwick had paid in the last two years the enormous sum of $6,905, which leaves a bonus of $6,905 to the owners of the building now occupied. The newspapers have published this matter several times. The last house of representatives gave Mr. Chadwick a cold, withering rebuke on this subject, and even commanded him not to pay to exceed $1,500 for rent; but nothing has since been heard from it. Yet every two years $6,905 is given away by Mr. Chadwick. Over four years this thing has been under his charge. In that time the State has lost over $13,812. Is it not time the people of the State should know why this is done, and what part, if any, of this $13,812 Mr. Chadwick receives. It seems hardly likely any sane man would give that amount of bonus and take nothing for all the last century he has received. Any one of his old acquaintances in Douglas county knows it is not like Chadwick to do business in that way. But Mr. Chadwick has other besetting sins. In 1870 he asked the legislature to increase the salary of his assistant $200, as the legislature abolished the office of adjutant general, which cost the State $1,500 and perquisites, and required the secretary of state to do the work of that office. But imagine the surprise of the members of the legislature of 1870, when the law reads clerical aid, and our secretary draws under both laws, and gets $1,000 a year instead of $800, as the legislature of 1870 intended. Again in 1872, our secretary asked the legislature to increase his pay to $1,000, quietly concealing the fact that he had been drawing $1,000 for two years. After pleading poverty and a good deal of begging he succeeded in getting his salary increased $1,000, as the legislature understood it. But Mr. Chadwick has actually drawn, according to the report of the committee on retrenchment and reform, under all three laws, a nice sum of $800, between 1870 and 1872, $2,000 from 1872 to 1874; in all $2,800, and is still drawing under the three laws $2,600 a year, that it never was intended he should have. It was so stated in the last house of representatives by Mr. Riddle, and Chadwick's brother Democrat from Linn county, Mr. Harvey Shelton, who were members in 1872.

But just a few words more. In the house journal of 1870 we find senate bill No. 38, to create the office of assistant treasurer of state, and define his duties, page 182; second reading, 225; amended, 261; passed, 322; signed, 371; enrolled, 371; approved, 377; house amendment concurred in by the senate, 452. These are all sworn officers between the introduction of this bill and of its approval by the governor. No. 5. The amendment in the journal reads, "Provided, receiving the office of assistant treasurer shall not be deemed a receipt of the money now in the treasury." This amendment does not appear in the law. A member of the committee on retrenchment and reform told me that the state treasurer drew $1,335 as percentage on the money in the treasury at the time of receiving the office, which this amendment was intended to prevent. Can it any longer be doubted that there is and has been for the last four years, a law-making power, somewhere between the approval by the governor and the session laws? Is there much doubt that the clerical aid bill of 1870 shared the same fate that the assistant treasurer's bill did. According to the record the assistant treasury bill was changed. According to the memory of members many other important laws have been changed. Who makes these alterations and does anybody get half or all for doing it, are the questions the people of this State want answered.

JAMES McDONALD.

PIUTE ETHNOLOGY.

(A la Darwin.)

Piute City, Wicky-up No. 1, May 24, 1874.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

I think but few instances (if any) are on record, where the history of a country, or a people, is not principally the records of war, or the natural results of wars. Even among our Indian tribes their history is mostly made up of wars, either among themselves, or with their prehistoric foe, the white man. There can be no authentic history written of our western tribes, since education is a necessary qualification to the accomplishment of such an object, and one which we are fully aware they do not possess. Their history, if it can be so called, is mostly made up of traditions, suppositions, probabilities, possibilities, and so on, coupled with what may be gained from long residence with the Indians themselves, as superstitious imaginations, legends, etc., etc., and with these we will have to rest satisfied, and make the best of it.

Like the Modoc war, which ended so (in)gloriously the struggle of the great Piute nation or a fragment of it, became at one time, the subject of serious alarm to the thickly populated country east of the Cascades, and frequently as many as half a dozen persons might be seen on the main street of Canyon City, completely blockading the thoroughfare, discussing the momentous question, the magnitude of which was so fully authenticated by your "special correspondent" during the stormy debate in council, of the leading representatives of the Government, and the red-man on the sunny banks of the Malheur. Like the "Rise of the Dutch Republic," or, nearer home, like the inauguration of the Great Rebellion, its origination may be traced to the ambitious, and prolific brain of one man. Trifling it was, when compared with either of the former, but yet, as I said of sufficient magnitude to create alarm in the breasts of many brave and warlike men, to stagnate business, to reduce county scrip at least one-half per cent. and render necessary the presence of a "special correspondent in the field."

Next to your correspondent, who with quill in hand boldly defied the threatened onslaught of the red-man, the downfall and cessation of that graphic struggle may also be traced to the indomitable courage and tenacity of one man, whose staunch patriotism, and manhood is only equaled by his sublime modesty. To see his manly form towering high above the degenerate race of aborigines over whom he rules, and like "Moses in the Wilderness" laying down the law on the tablets of their memory, imparting sage advice to the Sage, amidst the sage-brush and caution to the young and inexperienced, is to know, and appreciate the wise administration that gave to the people the security of peace, and the blessings of prosperity. History, therefore, must inevitably follow, the story of the Modoc tribe which found its "finale" at the end of a rope; and the early history, like the close lies buried beneath the shady groves of Fort Klamath, and the hostile tread of the American soldier, but not so with the noble red-man of the illustrious Piute nation. Their history goes back for many generations, I may say centuries, when according to Darwin they were roaming the primeval forest and the plain, in the garb and shape of a coyot. Strange and impossible as it may appear, the founder of the Piute nation was originally a coyota; a ravenous and voracious coyota, hence the morbid, sensual habits, and inclinations of the Piute Indian of the present day, whose only ambition is to roam the wild and unsettled country of the far West, preying on human flesh, and living the wild unsettled life of his antecedents. The first instance we have of the coyota assuming human form may be found in "Meacham's Ancient Mythology" or "Joaquin" Miller's "History of the Klamath and Modoc." Both of these excellent works are beautifully illustrated by "Brown" the modern hero of Modoc fame, who became so conspicuous in saving many lives in the early stage of that memorable campaign.

The Piute coyota used to make pies out of his plunder, thereby giving more relish to his dishes, and when strangers were invited to his table they thought him "very cute" as they termed it, so that after a time the term pi-cute was the name he was commonly known by, which of late years has been corrupted and the c dropped; hence the name Piute a name held in much reverence by Wm. Vincent Coalyard and other famous statesmen, and are equally as well known on the Pacific slope as that of Brown of "Wandering Tribe" notoriety or Father Beeson. Skeptics may doubt the origin of the word Piute as here given, but if they only consider for a moment the similiarity, even at this late day, between the two, they cannot but be convinced of its authenticity, and the popular works referred to should alone be sufficient evidence for conviction. Let us make a few comparisons, the coyota roams the wild and unsettled prairies hunting food, whether rabbits, dead animals, or unfortunate white men. So does the Piute. The coyota enjoys a good meal off the entrails of a defunct animal. So does the Piute. The coyota never washes his face or combs his hair. Neither does the Piute. There are many other peculiar and remarkable similarities between the two, which cannot possibly leave a doubt in any mind of the authenticity of both Miller and Meacham in their remarkable works.

Tradition informs us that the Coyota, one day roaming beyond his usual hunting grounds, encountered a fox in his rambles, and an intimacy sprung up between the two, which resulted in matrimony, and subsequently a treaty of peace between their tribes. The sagacity and cunning of Mr. Fox, renders to-day, those traits peculiar and invaluable to the Piute.

A FEARFUL HOMICIDE.

[From the Seattle Intelligencer, May 29.]

A shocking tragedy took place near Gellerson's logging camp on the Upper White river, in this county, on Wednesday last, resulting in the instant killing of Mr. Josiah Gellerson and the severe wounding of Mr. John Langston. The principal facts, as we learn them, are as follows: A number of persons interested in the litigation recently commenced between certain White river farmers and others engaged in logging on White river, were, on the day of the fatal event, engaged in assisting the county surveyor in making a survey of the channels of the river and the obstructions therein for the purpose of making a map to be used in evidence at the next term of the district court. While thus assembled, John Langston made use of language that irritated David Hughes, who retorted by calling Langston a d—d liar. The latter then struck Hughes in the face, who thereupon drew a revolver and fired at Langston over the shoulder of Mr. Henry McCabe, who happened to be standing near Hughes, and between him and Langston. The latter, as the pistol was aimed at him, stooped or attempted to dodge and received the ball in his shoulder. At this juncture, Gellerson sprang in front of Hughes to prevent his shooting again, and caught him by both arms above the elbows, and while holding him thus, Hughes shot Gellerson in the breast, the ball penetrating the heart, and of course killing him instantly. On the afternoon of the same day an inquest was held over the body by Richard Jeffs, justice of the peace, and a verdict was rendered by the coroner's jury in accordance with the facts as above stated. David Hughes is a youth of about eighteen years of age, and is a son of Dr. A. S. Hughes, representative-elect from this county to the next territorial legislature. Of course David was immediately apprehended by the bystanders and taken before Justice Jeffs. An examination was held on Thursday, resulting in the prisoner being committed on a charge of murder to await the action of the next grand jury, and yesterday he was brought to town and delivered into the custody of Sheriff Wyckoff. Though the wound received by Mr. Langston is quite painful, it is not in any wise dangerous. He also was arrested and taken before Justice Jeffs, on a charge of assault and battery, and upon waiving a preliminary examinaiton, was bound over to appear before the next grand jury.

Josiah Gellerson was a native of the State of Maine, where he was engaged in the logging business for a number of years. About eight years ago he removed to the State of Pennsylvania, where he continued in the same business until 1873, when he removed to this Territory, since which time he has carried on the logging business on White river in this county. He was 62 years of age, and leaves a wife, three sons and four daughters; two of whom, a son and an unmarried daughter, reside in this county. Mrs. Gellerson is supposed to be now on her way from the East to join her husband and children here. But a bitter disappointment awaits her, after crossing the continent to meet the companion of her life, as she will find, instead of joy and happiness in such a meeting, only mourning and a continued separation. Mr. Gellerson was an upright and enterprising citizen, and his death is universally regretted. His remains were interred in the Masonic cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral which took place at the brown church, was largely attended by friends and those who knew him in life, and were anxious to pay the last sad acts of respect to his memory.

THE POLYNESIAN'S VOYAGE.

REMARKABLE RESCUE OF TWO OF THE CREW FROM THE ICE.

The Toronto Mail has a long description of the recent voyage of the steamer Polynesian, which left Liverpool for Quebec, April 15th, having on board forty-five cabin and five hundred steerage passengers. We quote:

"Cape Ray was passed at 2:55 P. M. on Sunday, April 25th. A fog came on, and at 10 o'clock at night ice was again sighted. The passengers, Monday morning, saw a magnificent spectacle. The ship had got into the center of a large field of ice. For miles around, extending far beyond the range of vision, gigantic icebergs floated rapidly past, glistening in the flashes of the morning's sunlight like mountains of diamonds, or, as one of the spectators expressed it, like 'castles in the air.' The sight was grand beyond comparison, but awful in its possible effect upon the fate of the precious human freight of the gallant Polynesian. The favorite occupation was leaning over the sides of the vessel and watching the plowing up of the small pieces of ice, while only two feet away were tremendous blocks of crystal of from eight to twenty feet thick. On the 27th the ice grew thicker. The vessel struggled, but from noon on Monday to noon on the 27th she only proceeded thirty-seven miles. A consultation was held between the captain and the first engineer, and it was agreed on both hands that to proceed would be impossible. The fires were accordingly let down, and the vessel was practically allowed to drift. During the night the ice settled, and it was apparent to everybody that at least two or three days would have to be spent 'all among the icebergs.' On Wednesday between forty and fifty of the passengers, with one of the officers, formed an exploring expedition, armed with poles, ropes, and guns, the latter being taken in hopes of having some seal hunting, as large numbers of these creatures were observed a mile away. As the evening set in most of the adventurers returned, but as five of them were still two miles off, a gun was fired as a signal. Three of them succeeded, after a great deal of trouble, in getting back before nightfall. They stated that their two companions were on a large detached floating block of ice, and could not get off. Darkness immediately set in, bringing fears for the safety of the two wanderers. Two of the officers, three sailors, and one passenger were chosen among the volunteers to go in search of the lads. The brave company announced their intention of either rescuing Tom and Jerry, as the boys were familiarly called, or perishing in the attempt. With lanterns, ropes and ladders the forlorn hope departed, amidst the cheers of encouragement of the whole ship load. This was at 8 o'clock at night. While they were absent the greatest excitement prevailed on board, and several volunteers renewed their offer and wanted to make a second rescue party; but the captain did not think this advisable. All through the night anxious watchers peered through the darkness, and ever and anon they caught sight of the flashing of a lamp. The beating of the waves against the ice sounded like a funeral knell in the ears of the listeners, while the grinding of the icebergs rubbing against each other seemed to indicate what was the fate of the missing ones. For several hours no light was seen; but at 1 o'clock in the morning, just as those on the ship were casting hope aside, twinklings were seen in the distance, and shortly afterward the searching party were at the side of the vessel, having with them the unfortunate Tom and Jerry. Nearly all the passengers received the deliverers and the delivered as they stepped on deck. They were saluted with rounds of cheers of rejoicing. Tom and Jerry—whose correct names were Thomas Davis and James Turner—had drifted five miles from the ship, and were only saved at extreme hazard."

About Snails.—Snail-fattening is not the least strange of the industries connected with the culinary art as practised in Paris. It is carried on outside "the barriers," since it is clearly not worth while to pay octroi upon a gross of game, whereof great numbers may be prematurely dead. Most of the snails are turned into tanks to fatten, but some large breeders keep them in the open air. And what sort of fence do you think they erect to prevent their slimy flocks escaping? Walls they could climb over, were they as lofty as those of Babylon; ditches they could crawl through. But a line of sawdust, four inches broad, fresh laid each morning, is beyond their skill to cross. Eight or ten parks thus walled in make the snailmaster's preserve. He turns loose his daily consignment into one of them, and gives it nothing to eat during forty-eight hours. In two days the creatures are removed to another park, where they find cabbages, lettuces, endive, a little thyme, and a few vine leaves. Purified by two days' fasting, they attack this provender with fury, and eat and eat until they grow as fat as classic snail could ever be. Between eight and ten days of this luxurious regimen fits them for the kitchen, whither I don't care to fellow them. The importance of the industry is shown by figures adduced in the Municipal Council upon a proposition to raise the tax upon fatted escargots, now very small. Supporters of the increase proved that, if escargots were charged but one-quarter the rate levied on oysters, counting fifty of one to be worth a dozen of the other, Paris would take a revenue of 200,000 francs a year. And the consumption is growing enormously. I believe it a fact established, that eating escargots reduces a man's flesh till, in fact, nothing is left but bone and muscle. Fantees told me the same thing of their snail soup, a hideous compound. The edible snail of the Gold Coast has a shell quite three inches long and two inches high. From it he thrusts a pair of monstrous wings, four inches in length, beneath which his vast head protrudes. These wings are the great dainty, and they are served whole in the soup. I have tasted that also—we were not particular in the late campaign—but shuddering memory forbids to decide whether escargot of France or Fantee snail be the more horrible repast.—All the Year Round.

To Ease a Cough.—The best method of easing a cough is to resist it with all the force of will possible, until the accumulation of phlegm becomes greater; then there is something to cough against, and it comes up very much easier and with half the coughing. A great deal of hacking and hemming and coughing in invalids is purely nervous, or the result of mere habit, as is shown by the frequency with which it occurs while the patient is thinking about it, and its comparative rarity when he is so much engaged that there is no time to think or when the attention is impelled in another direction.

Monument to Edgar A. Poe.—Edgar A. Poe's memory is to be honored with a monument at last. The sum desired, $1,500, has been raised through the efforts of the Public School Teachers' Association of Baltimore, and the work will be begun at once. The design is an obelisk of pure Italian marble, with a bas-relief of Poe on one of the panels, and appropriate inscriptions and emblems on the other three. It is thought the monument will be ready for dedication within a few months.

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 3, 1875.

SOME THINGS TO BE EXPLAINED.

A correspondent whose letter appears this morning, offers a good opening for Secretary Chadwick to come to the front. And not Secretary Chadwick alone, but the other members of the State administration; for it is impossible the transactions referred to could have been carried on without the connivance or the culpable neglect of the others. The matter of paying two or three times as much for office rent for the State officials as it need cost, has been ventilated heretofore, but since no sufficient explanation has ever been given by the State government, the subject is still a proper one for inquiry. The secretary of state is clearly called upon to inform the people of the State why the taxes they pay to sustain the administration of the laws is thus wasted. And he is likewise called upon to explain why the direction of the last House of Representatives, with relation to economizing in the rental of apartments for the State officers is disregarded.

But though involving a smaller amount of money than the other matter mentioned by this correspondent, the failure of a law to reach the governor in the same form as it had when it was passed, is a matter of much greater gravity. We do not understand our correspondent to designate any particular person as the law-making power, between the legislative assembly and the governor, but to suggest that the position of the secretary of state makes it his duty to see that such crimes are not committed, and if by any means they are committed without his knowledge, then to ferret out and bring to justice the perpetrators. This, at least, is what the secretary should do, if the case is asstated by the writer, which we have no reason to dispute. This thing requires an explanation.

THE DEATH-BED OF JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE.

The disease of which General Breckinridge died was a complication of consumption with abscess of the liver. The circumstances of his departure are told by the Pittsburgh Gazette. His last hours were quiet and peaceful. On Sunday night he was restless, and sent for his regular physician, who administered an opiate, after which he slept till late the following morning. Then he was visited by Dr. Sayre, of New York, who dressed the wound made by an operation for the abscess a week previous. The doctor, seeing that a discharge was taking place from the wound, expressed a hope that the patient might yet recover. After this Breckinridge took some nourishment. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a change for the worse was perceptible, and his attendants became alarmed. Stimulants were administered, but without effect. He sank rapidly. Near 5 o'clock he lost the power of speech, and at fifteen minutes to six he passed away. Apparently his consciousness never forsook him till within a few moments of his death. There was no scene, no last words, nothing ostentatious in the manner in which he met the dread event. "He died as he had lived, modest and brave. The only allusions he made to death were once after the operation was performed on him last week by Drs. Sayre and Gross, when he said that he felt so comfortable he believed mortification had set in, and again in his will, made the next day, in which he used these words, 'After all my just debts, which are few and small, and the expense of a modest funeral paid, I desire,' etc. Around the death-bed of the general were his wife, two daughters and one son, and a few other immediate relatives."

COMING TO THEIR SENSES.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania are evidently getting their eyes open to a true view of the situation. An address has just been issued to the body of the party of that State, by the Committee of Sixty-two of the Union League making a strong appeal in favor of good and fit men for public offices. It refers to the recent reverses of the Republican party, and says the result of the last fall elections shows no change of sentiment in the party, but does show a disgust for the men whose misconduct has brought odium on the whole organization. The address declares that the proper and only effective remedy for this evil is in the selection of the best men in the community for official position, as without such candidates it is no longer possible to secure the suffrages of an intelligent people. That looks as if there might be some hope yet for the party managers to be brought to comprehend the progress that has been made during the last few years toward the emancipation of the people from party dictation. It can not be doubted that the principles avowed by the Republican party, and upon which the party won its first and most honorable victories are held to-day by the great body of independent Republicans as firmly as in the day of the party's trials; but the discovery that those principles were daily dishonored in the practices of the organization, and were merely put into the platforms for the purpose of deluding people into supporting selfish and unscrupulous political schemers for office. It will be well for the Republicans throughout the country, if their leaders are brought to a perfect understanding of the nature of the disease that threatens the death of the party.

OREGON IN THE CENTENNIAL.

We call attention to the letter of Hon. A. J. Dufur, centennial commissioner for this State, published this morning. Mr. Dufur has arranged for ample room for exhibition of the products of Oregon's resources and industries, the space assigned to our State being equivalent to 42x50 feet. If the credit of Oregon is to be sustained by the filling of this space compactly with the best that the State can show, it is high time to be at work. It is less than twelve months till the opening of the exposition.

The New Orleans Picayune having called for a "Clean Man's Party," the Pittsburgh Gazette remarks that if such a party is started in the somebody will make a fortune in soap ts.

EXPOSITION GOODS DUTY-FREE.

By an act of Congress approved June 18, 1874, all articles imported into the United States for the sole purpose of being exhibited at the Centennial Exposition, are to be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may make to prevent frauds upon the revenue. The Secretary has prescribed rules for the admission of articles in pursuance of this law, and among other things has designated New York, Boston, Portland (Me.), Burlington (Vt.), Suspension Bridge (N. Y.), Detroit and Port Huron (Mich.), Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, New Orleans and San Francisco, as the only ports at which such articles, claiming the benefits of the law, can be entered duty-free. The regulations require a special form of entry of all such goods, with greater particularity as to details than in case of dutiable goods, and contain other safeguards against the importation of other goods under pretense of their being Exposition articles, and against the subsequent sale or consumption of Exposition goods, without paying the duties thereon, such articles of course becoming liable to pay only upon their diversion from the purpose of exposition to that of sale or consumption.

John Sutherland in June, 1872, while crossing the track of the New York Central and Hudson river railway, in a New York City street, was struck by a locomotive and sustained considerable injuries in the arm and leg. He sued the company for $20,000. The defense was contributory negligence in not looking up and down the street for an approaching engine before attempting to cross. The case has just been tried, and has resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff with $3,600 damages, the court instructing the jury that the failure to "look out for the locomotive" was not such contributory negligence as constitutes a defense.

The Philadelphia Ledger suggests this plan for raising money for the centenary: "It seems to me that the centennial commission could raise $400,000 or $500,000 during this year, by issuing season tickets. It is hardly likely that the average of our citizens would visit the exhibition more than ten times, so that if they would now issue season tickets at $5 each, there would be a large number sold at once. Let it be understood that they are only to be sold during this year at that price, and then raised to a higher price during the exhibition, and this would stimulate a large sale now."

A friend suggests that public attention be called to the fact that under a law of Congress, passed February 2, 1872, the regular election of congressmen in all the States is to be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday of November, in and after the year 1876, thus preventing any election of congressman at our next June election. We had supposed the change was generally known, though possibly it is not. Such is the law, at any rate.

The Republican and Indedendent papers of the East and of San Francisco, so far as we have seen, unanimously denounce the action of the Democratic canvassing council of New Hampshire in attempting to get control of the State Senate through a fraud as shameless as any that was ever perpetrated by the infamous Louisiana returning board. We are curious to see what the Democratic organs have to offer on the subject.

General Logan threatens to write a reply to that part of General Sherman's "Memoirs" which speaks of Logan and Frank Blair as "political generals." Logan thinks this impugns his motives in entering the army, and his honor. The Blairs have already made a fuss about the matter. An infliction from Logan would be truly an affliction.

The New Hampshire Statesman has been noting the expression of the Republican press of Ohio, and says the papers are nearly unanimous in demanding that an anti-third-term plank be put into the platform of the party.

M. M. Estee, author of "Estee's Pleadings," is talked of as the Independent candidate for governor of California.

OREGON IN THE CENTENNIAL.

UNITED STATES CENTENNIAL COMMISSION,
PHILADELPHIA, April 20, 1875.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

We are here, in the commission rooms, all right. Have organized, visited the park and there can be no conception of the amount of labor being performed, and that has been performed already, in perfecting the work necessary for this great exhibition without making personal inspection of the grounds themselves. We are informed by the contractor (Mr. Dobins) that fully 6,000 workmen are now employed on the construction of the memorial building alone.

We have applied for and obtained 2,100 square feet for the exhibitions of our State in the several departments, viz: minerals, mines and mining, 400 square feet; geological exhibit, 100 square feet; agriculture, horticulture and textiles, 1,600 square feet. Total, 2,100 square feet.

We have made special arrangements for the exhibition of geological collections, or cabinets, and we hope our citizens will not be slow in assisting our worthy friend Condon to [illegible] logical wealth of our State. Yours in haste,

A. J. DUFUR,
Centennial Commissioner for Oregon.

A BLUNDER OF A CRIME.—In our opinion, there is no sound or substantial reason why a sectional element should enter into the approaching canvass. The reappearance of such an element would be an unqualified misfortune, the more to be regretted because unnecessary. The interests of the North and the South are precisely the same. Each is bound up in the success or want of success of the other. The one thing that separated them in so many sad and terrible ways has been done away with—done away with absolutely and forever in all its forms. There is no reason why South Carolina and New York should not be as heartily united as New York and Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, there is no longer such a thing in existence as a sectional interest opposed to another sectional interest from the Gulf to the Adirondacks. Those who would make it appear that there is, are either hopelessly blind or wickedly reckless. There are American interests only, and these are common to the whole country. Every act, every word on either side that obscures this great fact is a blunder or a crime.—N. Y. Times.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—A murderous and unprovoked assault was committed on a small boy by a Chinaman on Tuesday forenoon about 11 o'clock, at the salmon fishery of A. Booth & Co., one mile and a half above Astoria. The circumstances of the affray are substantially as follows: Mr. Booth has employed at the fishery a large number of Chinamen. He also has in his employ a lad named Johnny Dillon, aged about 13 years. Johnny was principally engaged in carrying the cans from where they were filled with fish to those engaged in soldering them. On Tuesday morning the boy had occasion to pass one of the Chinamen who was engaged in soldering the tops of the cans. Just as he was passing the Celestial, Johnny playfully struck his elbow against the Chinaman's side. Although meant in fun, the Chinaman became greatly enraged at the supposed indignity offered, and seizing hold of a soldering iron, he dealt the boy a powerful blow in the region of the left temple. The iron was just snatched from the burning coals, and was red hot, and in addition to inflicting a fearful gash, severely burned the flesh. Instantly on receiving the blow the boy fell senseless to the floor, and it was thought that he was killed. Consciousness returned at length and a surgeon was summoned, who dressed the wound. Meantime one of the white men who witnessed the assault, caught hold of the Chinaman to prevent his making an escape, as he was leaving the building. There were in the room at the time about 40 Celestials engaged in cutting up the salmon, and no sooner had the white man laid hold of their comrade than they rose up in revolt, drew their knives and compelled him to allow the murderous assaulter to escape. After getting away from the fishery, the Chinaman started along down the beach toward Astoria. However, the sheriff of the county was notified at once of the crime committed, and that officer started in pursuit. He soon overhauled the escaping [Chinaman and] brought him to Astoria. During [the] afternoon the Celestial was tried on Tuesday [for assault and] battery and fined $50. [In] charge of assault and [in default he was committed] to jail. Young In default he was committed, although the Dillon is in a fair way to recover, [had the] escape was almost miraculous, for [had the] blow been dealt a little higher it would [doubt]less produced instant death.

THE ENTERTAINMENT.—A large and cultivated audience was present last evening at the Taylor street M. E. Church, the occasion being the musical and literary entertainment given under the auspices of the ladies of the congregation. Want of time and space precludes particularization and mention of the individual performances, but we will content ourself by saying that the entertainment was a decided financial success, and afforded the audience great satisfaction in a musical sense. The chorus singing, led by Dr. J. H. Hatch, was exceptionally good, and constituted the real gem of the evening. The entertainment commenced at 8 o'clock and lasted without intermission for nearly two hours. A number of the selections rendered—vocal and instrumental—were presented in a very creditable manner, and won merited applause. The reading by Miss Cardinell is worthy of special mention, and loud and prolonged calls were made for that lady to appear again, an honor which she modestly declined. From the opening to the concluding chorus the entertainment was managed in a very satisfactory manner, and doubtless afforded the large audience much pleasure. At the close of the entertainment an invitation was extended the audience to step into the basement of the church where was provided an abundance of delicious strawberries and cream. This invitation was generally accepted, as but few persons felt like slighting such a tempting repast after the musical feast they had enjoyed in the auditorium. A very snug sum was realized.

A PROFESSIONAL IMPOSTOR.—Some weeks ago a stranger arrived in this city who appeared to be in destitute circumstances. On several occasions while wandering about the streets this individual, without any apparent cause fell to the sidewalk, and for a time would be deprived of the power of speech. While laboring under the effects of the fit (or what was supposed to be a fit) the man would foam at the mouth, gnash his teeth and breathe heavily. It was observed that the fellow always took care to have his fits in front of some large store, and in as public a place as he could select. Of course a crowd would always be attracted to the spot, a result which the man appeared anxious to accomplish. On recovering from the paroxysm he would have a sad story to relate to the symyathizing crowd about his destitution. An appeal to charity under such circumstances could not well be resisted, and a collection was generally taken up. By practicing upon the sympathies of those who witnessed his physical affliction, the fellow managed to collect sufficient means to live in comparative comfort. However, it soon became apparent that the fit was a "sympathy dodge," and constituted the capital on which he traded. When the fact was revealed that he was a professional impostor, a sum of money was raised and he was sent away to San Francisco on the steamer. He arrived in safety at that city, and is again imposing on susceptible persons in the manner before mentioned. His "little game" has been discovered, and the fellow is properly denounced by the papers.

WAIVED EXAMINATION.—A young man named Wm. Marshall was arrested on Monday evening at Salem, by Officer Minto, on a charge of giving liquor to Indians. On being brought before United States Commissioner Willis Tuesday morning, he waived examination and, in conjunction with Quill and Amos Harvey, who were arrested Monday on a similar charge, came to Portland Tuesday in charge of Deputy United States Marshal W. P. Burns, to be tried in the United States district court.

CANDIDATE FOR CADETSHIP.—Our Salem correspondent under date of 2d inst., says: "Jake L. Wortman, of Oregon City, at present a student in the Willamette University, is a candidate for the appointment to cadetship from Oregon in the U. S. naval academy at Annapolis, Md., with flattering prospects of success. The appointment would certainly be a most worthy one."

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—Last evening the Emmet Guard elected the following officers to fill vacancies: M. Phelan, 1st lieutenant; P. Leroy, 2d lieutenant; W. J. Daly, 2d sergeant. The annual picnic being spoken of, it was decided to get up a big affair on the 4th of July, of which something more will be known in a few days. They mean to make it a big thing.

SUICIDAL ATTEMPT.

A YOUNG WOMAN SUPPOSED TO BE DERANGED ATTEMPTS TO THROW HERSELF FROM THE EXPRESS TRAIN BELOW SALEM BUT IS TIMELY RESCUED —AN EXCITING INCIDENT

Persons who came down on the express train yesterday morning from Salem furnish us the following particulars of a singular and very exciting affair which transpired on board the cars between Salem and Portland A short time prior to the arrival of the down train at Salem from Albany a girl, aged about sixteen years from her appearance stepped into the coach connected with the Chemeketa Hotel, and rode out to the station The driver of the coach says in response to inquiry that he does not know who the girl is or where she came from She did not stay all night at the hotel and he never saw her before she stepped into the coach On reaching the station the girl got out and, as the train had not yet arrived took a seat in the office Passengers who were sitting in the office observed the somewhat restless and agitated appearance of the girl as she entered the room, and remarked that she acted a little strange Soon after taking a seat the girl began untying the shoestring on one foot She pulled the shoe off and afterwards drew her foot out of the stocking which conduct seemed very unusual in a public station room and attracted general attention After drawing off the stocking she turned it inside out and appeared to be searching for some missing article Failing to find the object of her search, the girl put on her stocking and shoe carefully tying the string of the latter She then proceeded in a very methodical manner to take off the other shoe and stocking In the bottom of the latter she found that which she was looking for—a small sum of money Putting on the shoe the girl took up the money and with a reckless hand scattered it about on the office floor By that time those who witnessed the singular proceeding became convinced that the girl must either be drunk or insane Some person kindly picked up the loose coin and handed it to the girl and directed her to purchase a ticket This she did, and while paying for the ticket dropped some of the money on the floor Just then the shrill whistle of the approaching train was heard, and those in the office rose up and were leaving The girl started out too leaving the money lying on the floor A kind hearted lady whose notice had been attracted by the girl s conduct and whose earnest sympathies were enlisted in her behalf, directed her attention to the fact that she was leaving the money Mechanically the girl picked the scattered pieces of coin up and entered the cars along with the others The lady just mentioned took a seat alongside the girl and endeavored to draw her into a conversation an effort in which she did not succeed To all questions the girl returned an incoherent or evasive answer and the lady could gain no satisfactory information Soon after the cars were speeding towards Portland Conductor Stroud came round collecting tickets When he asked the girl for a ticket she replied that she had none Mr Stroud remarked in his blandest tones and with a sly wink loitering in one corner of his optic, that people who travel on this train are usually provided with tickets to which the girl reiterated in a rather petulant manner that she had no ticket to give and asked him to go along and not to bother her The lady who was sitting near made the observation that the girl did have a ticket for she saw her purchase one prior to entering the cars Stroud, supposing the girl meant it for a jest passed on to the next car Scarcely had he disappeared when the girl sprang up wildly and started toward the door There was something significant in her excited action, and a strange look that bespoke a desperate determination Thoroughly alarmed at the girl s movements the lady sprang up and followed her She was not an instant too soon for just as the insane girl reached the door of the car she made a rush for the platform, evidently with the intention of throwing herself under the wheels of the train With a celerity and degree of strength which even surprised the lady she grasped with a firm hand the girl's shawl Fortunately the shawl was wrapped about the waist of the would be suicide and she was held on the platform until several passengers rushed forward and drew her forcibly into the car, despite her frantic struggles to commit the rash deed Overcome by the exertion and excitement of the moment, the poor girl fell on the floor in a violent fit Gervais being the next station it was determined to stop the train and commit the girl to the care of a physician but before the point was reached, she had four or five severe spasms and it was thought she would surely die Great excitement prevailed on board the train over the affair It was the generally entertained opinion, of all the passengers that the girl was laboring under the influence of some drug that she had either taken it to destroy her existence or had been given the medicine by some vile wretch so that he might be enabled to accomplish his licentious designs on her person who, after the gratification of his depraved passion, had abandoned her to her fate On reaching Gervais, a physician was hastily summoned and the girl committed to his care After a moment s examination of the case the physician expressed a decided opinion that the girl was drugged A stomach pump was procured, but before it could be used the train started for Portland and nothing further could be obtained as to the result of the examination or the girl s condition The incident was the occasion of the most intense excitement on board the train, and great sympathy was felt and expressed among the passengers for the young stranger, the cause of whose insane and suicidal actions was shrouded in mystery If she is the innocent victim of a foul outrage no effort will be spared to track up the deep and irreparable wrong done her to the guilty party or parties Strange to say no one either at the station or on the train, knew the girl, or had ever seen her before. Our informant states that she was plainly but neatly dressed and very passable in her appearance

Since writing the above we learn that the girl formerly resided in this city, and that her mother still lives here The truth of this portion of the story we do not vouch for but only give it as a report All the particulars will probably be known to day

I. O. R. M.

Pursuant to announcement the Red Men of the city held their fourth annual picnic yesterday Early in the forenoon the members of that order assembled at their hall and escorted by the Portland city band took up the line of march for the O S N Co s wharf at which the fine steamer Annie Stewart and the commodious barge Lizard were moored Several hundred persons were found on the boat in readiness for the excursion and the wharves were lined with a great number of persons who had assembled to see the picnickers off Shortly after 9 o clock when all who desired to attend were safely on board the usual signal was given and the boat was off with its precious cargo of pleasure seekers the band discoursing a familiar air on the hurricane deck

Nothing of special moment transpired during the trip to the grounds on Sauvie s Island which were reached shortly after 11 o clock The excursion is made their way at once to the dancing platform where some partook of the dance while others began their preparations for the comfort of the inner man A shower lasting about a half an hour put a quietus to the pleasures during that space of time but it served to create some amusement in ways that were best understood by those who found it most difficult to procure shelter Lunch and dancing followed the damp spell and then the boat race became the main attraction This occupied the attention of the greater portion of those in attendance for an hour The crew in the Neptune, of which William J Bowden was captain and stroke won after an exciting contest with the boat manned by Mr I Chapelle and three others A pair of miniature oars was the prize awarded to the victors The leaping match was won by H Hamilton, who carried off the honors in the grasshopper race Henry Weber made the best time in the fat men s race, and was therefore entitled to the prize John Kearney came in ahead in the foot race The ladies elected Mr Geo C Sears to be the homeliest man on the grounds and he was presented with a pocketmirror Mrs Daly was by vote of other gentlemen, at ten cents a head, declared to be the handsomest lady in the immediate vicinity The announcement of these decisions created a great deal of fun It was now time to prepare for the return trip and at 5 o clock all were aboard again The gangplank was drawn in and the steamer began her homeward run arriving at the place of starting shortly after 8 o clock All safe cries then ran below and then the excursionists took leave of the steamer wending their way homewards in good spirits The Red Men marched to the hall and after divesting themselves of the regalia, passed resolutions complimentary of Capt Wm Smith of the steamer Annie Stewart who treated them so kindly and the Howell Bros of Sauvie s Island, for many favors extended, and then adjourned The picnic notwithstanding the gloomy aspects of the weather at times, was pronounced by all a complete success

The Willamette Chief is undergoing repairs at the foot of Washington street

Water pipes are being laid on Tenth street from the Yamhill street main to connect with the new dwelling between Taylor and Salmon streets

Yesterday morning steam was raised at the pumps of the water company on the bank of the river above town and the summer job of supplying the Sixth street reservoir with water was commenced.

A few days ago a number of buoys from the Columbia river were brought up to this city for repairs which workmen are to day engaged in making at the machine shops on First and Salmon streets

Yesterday the bark Rival completed discharging freight at Salmon street and dropped down to the W R T Co s wharf where she is taking a cargo of Columbia river salmon and other Oregon products for San Francisco

At the entertainment given last evening the old Philharmonic executed the choruses admirably Time accent harmony—all artistic yet with no suitable opportunity for practice Such a degree of excellence makes a lover of music long for the once famous choruses of that society

A Frenchman intending to compliment a young lady, by calling her a gentle lamb said She is one mutton as is small

Quip (to Mr Q)—Well Jew and you like the sermon my dear Mrs Q— O perfectly splendid Such loves of bonnets

Candie says that his wife at least, whatever may be the experience of census takers with others of her sex is always ready to tell her rage

"Meat me at the spelling match at Mies c Hall," was the invitation written probably by one who stepped down and out on the first round

Jemima said a fashionable miss to her friend, "I think Charley Potts is perfectly splendid he can get on my gloves and wears spit-curls"

The boy who ran away from school to go fishing all alone and caught himself in the lip, says he's got enough of fishing on his own hook

An instructor asked a French girl why beer in French is feminine She replied it was probably owing to the fact that the boys liked it so well

It is in vain to hope to please all alike Let a man stand with his face in what direction he will, he must necessarily turn his back on one half of the world

It has been discovered that shaky firms usually belong to the Millerite persuasion because they all keep the day of their going up a profound secret —Boston Advertiser

A little American lad who had just commenced reading the newspapers asked his father if the word "Hon" prefixed to the name of a member of Congress, meant "honest"

An assessor asked a woman how many chickens she had, and, doubting her word proceeded to count them She took him to the bee hive kicked it over and invited him to count the bees —Mad

Don't Take em — Mamma said a precocious little boy who against his will was made to rock the cradle of his baby brother, if the doctor has any more babies to give away don't you take 'em

They have a curious inscription on a flag floating from the top of the Tabernacle at a Massachusetts camp-meeting where they also quote the price of lots somewhat as follows "The earth is the Lord's at $250 a lot, forty by sixty feet"

May I leave a few tracts? asked a travelling quack doctor of a lady who responded to his knock "Leave some tracks" Certainly you may," said she, looking at him most benignly over her specs, "leave them with the heel toward the house if you please"

"And now, Mrs Sullivan" said the counsel "will you be kind enough to tell the jury whether your husband was in the habit of striking you with impunity" "Wid what, sir?" "With impunity" "He was, sir now and thin but he struck me oftener wid his fisht"

—At Valley Stream, Long Island a man fell between two trains ... to jump from one to the other With the exception of a slight contusion he was unharmed When some of the railroad employees stooped to pick him up he waved them off, saying "I can pick up my own corpse"

A Brenton peasant, on his way to Paris, stopped at a barber shop in Rambouillet While the barber was stropping his razor the peasant noticed a dog sitting near his chair, and staring at him fiercely "What is the matter with that dog" The barber answered with an unconcerned air, "That dog is always there—You see when I cut off an ear—" "Well" "Well he eats it"

Sarcastic, but Suggestive—A Quaker gentleman, riding in a carriage with a fashionable lady decked with a profusion of jewelry heard her complain of the cold Shivering in her lace bonnet and shawl as light as a cobweb, she exclaimed "What shall I do to get warm?" "I really don't know," replied the Quaker solemnly "unless thee should put on another breastpin"

"How much a peck for potatoes?" asked a gentleman in market on Monday morning The price suited him, and he was about to purchase when a thought suddenly struck him "Wait a moment my good woman" he said, "I fear these potatoes were picked on Sunday" "No, sir they were not," she replied, "but to tell the truth, they grew on Sunday"—Christian Union

The St Louis Globe thus describes a fire in a milliner's shop "The flames crowded through the door and started in for fun They tried on spring hats and jumped up on the chairs and tables to admire themselves in the mirrors Then they danced hither and thither among the laces and embroideries feeding on ostrich feathers till they became bloated, and then trampled the ruches under foot and stamped the beauties from out the flowers until in all the wreck of matter they were left the only bright things

He left the spelling bee at 10 o'clock and stopped in a saloon on his way home Here he met several friends who "set em up" divers times, and he reached home about midnight with a confused brain, and a very demoralized pair of legs Then he swore that somebody had stolen the keyhole, but his wife, with a fearful scowl on her brow and a lamp in her hand admitted him Drunk! she exclaimed "D r u n c (hic), drunk Thaz easy nuff" "Brute" "B r o o t (hic), give us a harder one" "Idiot" "Thaz harder (hic), but I kin spellum I-d—I d g—I d i g t Idiot Now give us a stunner (hic)" She picked up a poker and gave him a "stunner" and the spelling bee adjourned

Punctuating Jokes with Nudges —Some afflicted person writes to a Boston paper It is not a pleasure to have converse with you one of those individuals who punctuate their relation of what they consider particularly good stories of funny occurrences with pokes, nudges, and digs in the ribs The worst of it is the jokes of these funny creatures are made up of nine nudges and thrusts and one part wit and for instance, in listening to the story of a large headed man trying on a small hat we endured the following; By the by, speaking of hats [pokes us in the bread basket and stands back as if to view the effect] did you hear the joke on Bumps? [Slaps on the shoulder and laughs] Biggest joke of the season [Punch in the breast bone] Bumps, you see was just coming out of the hotel dining room [Nudge in our ribs with elbow] Well he's got a tremendous big head you know [grab on the lappel of our coat] so two of us hid his hat [wink and punch with bony index finger] and put four other fellows' drab hats just like his in its place [Poke in the shirt bosom] Bumps comes out tries first one hat [poke] then another [punch], finally he got mad and [elbow jam] jammed the third one on so hard he split it open [Tremendous thrust in stomach] Ha! ha! ha! Jim Bustak's hat! And Bumps had to stand treat—three bottles—ha! ha [Tremendous slap that took the remaining breath out of our body]

There is nothing given in local finance developed by the opening of the month in excess of the test that the amount of money in general circulation is in chimerical limited supply on to the requisite necessities of the community than is usually the case when the bank and other lending institutions are in a liberal spirit at present The reason of this is that owing mainly to little being done in anything on the part of sale to secure capital almost except what is done by the agricultural population Manufacturers of all kinds grow very slowly and the few in our State employing as they do a few hundred men though accomplishing something and reflecting credit on the business enterprise of the proprietors are nothing but a tithe of the goods consumed in our State which might be made here It has been well said that the history of the world and its present condition are a table that this fact—that all countries are poor which export crude materials and import the manufactured articles—the tendency of the people is all the time toward the condition of dependence To this there have been no exceptions and we would do well to heed the warning and escape the doom Where the great industries agriculture and manufacture are the general property is assured

In trade circles there is a manifest decline in the activity noticed a few week ago The high price of gold during the spring months has operated in favor of merchants on this coast and nearly offset the advance on freights by the overland railway which otherwise would have been more severely felt The new classification of goods freighted by that route promises without speedy modification to greatly reduce the amount of merchandise transported across the continent By the new schedule rates upon dry goods carpetings etc have been very considerably increased and so also of other staple goods and some increase in shipments via Panama and around the Horn is already noticed This state of things ought to stimulate local manufactories and instead of continuing in our dependent condition Oregon and California ought to raise or make almost everything consumed in their borders When this is done we shall hear fewer complaints of dull times and scarcity of money

The Wool Trade

There is a noticeable increase in the receipts both of valley wool and that of Eastern Oregon and Walla Walla The former is held at 24@25 cents per pound and the latter at 22@25 Of course these figures are not for coarse earthy or burry lots though the former and the latter dirt cutties are not more common in Oregon wools than in those of other countries The manner of packing this season so far shows some improvement over last but yet some lots are already reaching the market that have not been as well prepared as they might have been and have been compelled to offer a reduction on the price they would have brought with a little more care in cleaning before packing The next outgoing steamer will take the first important shipment of the season only a few bales having been shipped heretofore California is now sending large shipments East and it is reported that indifferent success is being met in effecting sales at figures leaving a margin for shippers The clip of Oregon this spring it is estimated will be about 5,000,000 pounds and it ought to bring an average of 20 cents per pound or one million dollars in this market While a great many of the sheep which have been brought from the East to this coast and sold as pure bloods when they were very far from it the stock of sheep in Oregon is vastly better than it was a few years ago but at the same time a want of care in raising and preparing for market has kept our product well down in the list of choice wools

The Wheat Market.

The usual quiet of the market is generally undisturbed as there are now but few parties in this market who are at all anxious to buy at anything like the prices at which the remaining surplus is supposed to be held but that is mostly supposition only as there have recently been but few offers to sell at any figures holders seeming as well satisfied to rest easy and await the turning of the market tide as buyers We believe that turn will be in favor of the former when it comes but it is not certain at all that it will come for some weeks yet In fact it is more than likely that the local market will continue to drag along about as at present at least the product of another harvest is on the market but few sellers investigating and but few buyers urging matters Developments from day to day however will render more probable well grounded estimates as to the future which at present needs much to make it clear

An offer to sell 2,000 bushels was made in this market to day the holder asking over $1 65 per cental which was bid he claiming that he could place it at Albany on a better basis What the result as to a sale his further investigation of this market brought about, we did not learn We believe the bid mentioned is about the maximum figure safe to give as a current quotation here now
